The Banpo Museum is located in the eastern of Xian City. As the first museum at the prehistoric site, it was built at the base of the excavations of the Banpo site. It opened to the public formally in 1958; The Banpo Site is a typical Neolithic matriarchal community of the Yangshao Culture dating back about 6,000 years. The Site Hall is about 3,000 square meters and contains residential, pottery making and burial section. And among the three, the residential section is the main part of the site, including the huts, kilns and tombs of the primitive residents. All these present us an outlook of the aboriginal village and the hard situations of the forefathers in pursuing the civilization, reflecting the production level and the social systems at that period of time.
